Market commentary

Political uncertainty and trade concerns meant that global equity market performance was mixed in the third quarter. US equities continued to outperform and saw records broken with the longest American bull market ever. UK equities lagged behind in part due to uncertainty in the Brexit talks. European markets in general underperformed as concerns surrounding Italy and Turkey intensified but economic indicators are pointing towards future growth. Asia Pacific equities were more resistant to the political, trade and monetary policy worries. A number of central banks including the US, Canada, UK, and Norway increased interest rates.
